Throughout his life, the opinions of the Marquis de Villette were well known, and he had frequently expressed the intention of leaving his wealth to the man he chose to consider his rightful King. But a law of 1832, prohibiting the heirs of Charles X from ever again holding or inheriting property in France, is still unrepealed, and the legacy meditated by the Marquis de Villette would have consequently, been null and void.

He seems, in effect, to have relinquished the idea, and to have left his estate, in good faith, to the Count de Dreux Breze. The action to break the will was brought by M. de Montreuil, a cousin of the deceased Marquis. M. de Montreuil was named in the will as the universal legatee, in case the TRAINS ARRIVE.

Rumbles Among the Pyrenees. Rambles Among the Pyrenecs.

The New York Express says that since our fine ladies take their fashions from France, and are especially ready to copy the habits of the Empress Eugenie, at least in the matter of dress, it would be well for them to imitate one of her peculiarities, of which a imitate one of her peculiarities, of which a recent exchange paper brings us word. During the summer she was at the Eaux Bounes, a watering place at the foot of the Pyrenees, and might be seen romping up and down the mountains, trudging at times as far as the snow that lies all summer along their sides, picking her way on foot by the springs, not at all alraid of losing herdigalty, but pretty sure of finding health and spirits, careless how she muddies her feet, but yet, with his dress pianed up in nonchalent style, so that it need not be unnecessarily soiled. Perhaps we shall soon have the dresses so that it need not be unnecessarily soiled. Perhaps we shall soon have the dresses pinned up in our streets, all Imperatrice. Her Majesty evidently retains some of the tastes for which Mile. Montijo was famous; and as she was so near her native Spain, doubtless the Pyrenean airs revived her ancient feelings. It must have been an infinite relief to her to escape from etiquettes and equerries for a while, and scamper over the hills like a sensible girl once more.

may be of use in conjecturing the destiny of the gray-eyed fillibuster: The news from Honduras, by the John A. Toylor last right, has, we understand, re-newed the hope of Walker's friends in this city that his life, and that of his second in command, Col. Rudler, will yet be spared. This hope appears to be founded upon pri-vate conversations held with Capt. Salmon, of the farms, previous to the castures of the of the Icarus, previous to the capture of the party.

In these conversations, we are assured In these conversations, we are assured Capt. S. not only expressed open sympathy with the party personally, but the hope, and that frequently, that they would all make good their escape. He even intimated that he would be glad to be the means of saving the conditions of the conditi their lives, which he thought then in danger.

This does not agree very well with his action, so far as known, after the capture of the party, but the fact that both Walker and Budler were still alive on the 13th, five days after the time the Spanish steamer reported they were to be shot, leads many to hope that the terms on which they were delivered. that the terms on which they were delivered up at Truxillo have not been correctly

It is, moreover, scarcely to be believed that a British officer, like Capt. Salmon, who is said to be kind in heart and gentle in manner, would, of his own accord, deliver up men whom he captured contrary to the law of nations into the hands of a semi-barbarous people, knowing beforehand what would be their fate. The Tsylor, on the other hand, positively reports by telegraph other hand, positively reports by telegraph that Walker and Rudler were to be shot on than what most of them are: The railroad conductor is one of the productions of the age—a recent phase of hu-manity. Amid the roar of a score or two of iron wheels, and flying like a bird, he must lead a quiet life; accurate amid confusion, patient amid vexation, courteous amid censure and complaint, and prompt as the sun a first-rate conductor can be made out o no poorer material than a first-rate man no poorer material than a first-rate man. Job was never a conductor; that trial was spared him. Of all sorts of people, all sorts of money, all sorts of weather, he is the special victim. He can not keep aloof from a bear or a boar, any more than he can from a bride or a beauty. Like death, he must approach "with equal step," and pay his respects to every body. He must be accountable for the snow-drift that obstructs the track, for the broken rail that tumbles the track, for the broken rail that tumbles the track, for the broken rail that tumbles the train into the ditch, for the cars that failed to connect. He must know when every body will get every where, what it will cost to go, and where it is best to stay. He meets people sometimes who do not know where they are going, and he must be able to tell them; people who do not know where they got aboard, and he must gently remind them.

TERRIBLE EFFECTS OF LIGHTNING IN THE NORTH—Two Men Killed and Three Injured. In the town of Wood's Comas, Mich., a few days since, during a heavy thunder storm, the lightning struck a two-story blacksmith shop, the upper story of which is occupied by Mr. Frederick Young, as a dwelling. At the time of the accident there were five persons in the building; Sylvester K, Joles, a son of Mr. Joles, Mr. Young, a son of Hugh Barber, and another boy who were in the lower part of the shop, together with some horses. The lightning struck a stove-pipe and ran down to a stove in the upper story, breaking the stove in pieces. It then passed through the floor without further damage above. Five individuals all lying prostruce. above. Five individuals all lying prostrate apparently dead, and one, the son of Mr Sarber, with his clothes on fire! Mr. Young procured assistance as soon as possible and attempted to revive the sufferers, but life was extinct in two, Mr. Joles and the son of Mr. Barber. The latter was shockingly burned before the fire could be extinguished. The other sufferers are recovering. The dog was killed, and the cat has never been seen since.

INTERESTING STATISTICS OF THE CENSUS.-Interesting Statistics of the Census.—
The census shows that the annual increase in the population of the United States since 1790 is about three per cent. In 1715 the population of the Colonies was 433,500, of whom 58,500 were negro slaves. The present population is about 30,000,000, of whom about 4,000,000 are negroes. Our public schools are attended by 4,000,000 of children, we owe about $260,000,000, of which $26,000,000 are held by foreigners. It takes 750 paper-mills held by foreigners. It takes 750 paper-mills and 2,000 steam engines to supply our pub-lishers and newspapers with printing paper at a cost of $27,000,000 per annum.

A STRAMER FURNISHED TO AN AFRICAN TRAVELER.—Dr. Livingston, the African traveler, after many entreaties, is to have a traveler, after many entreaties, is to have a new steamer to replace the worn-out one, which he has hitherto employed in his explorations. The Lords of the Admiralty have just dispatched from Woolwich, after a thorough refitting, her, Majesty's screw steam-sloop Fioners, of 350 horse-power, freighted with victualling and other stores for the exploring party. It is to be placed at the command of Dr. Livingston, immediately upon its arrival in the waters of the Zambesi.

REMARKABLE MENTAL PHENOMENON .- A well educated young lady (says Once a Week) remained for four years, alternating at frequent intervals between the loss and possession of her memory. Gov. Seward in Kansas-His Address to the People of Lawrence. LEAVENWORTH, September 27.-Governor Seward addressed a crowd of 5,000 or 6,000 people at Lawrence vesteriny. He expressed gratification at the fulfillment of a long-chergratification at the fulfillment of a long-cherished desire and duty he owed to the people of Kansas, to visit them in their own homes. "I desire to speak to you hore, where I have renewed the memories of the contest waged upon this soil. While I see around me broken implements, with which that contest was waged by the aggressors under the plea of popular sovereignty, which left the people perfectly free to do as they pleased, subject to the Constitution of the United States, which they were left perfectly free to interpret as they pleased, while the authorities at Washington had never been able to interpret it to their own satisfaction or that of ties at Washington had never been able to interpret it to their own satisfaction or that of the American people. While Kansas is the youngest and laest favored with political power, yet she is the most inflexible and ost constant. "The two richest States are New York and Massachuzetts; and they are so merely because they are the freest, wisest, most iberty-loving.

"The cause of all the interest I have feit in you has been merely this—that you oc-cupy a pivotal position in the United States. "With regard to freedom and slavery, there is no contest, no difference on this sub-ject—slong the line of the Norta-eastern States they are all for freedom—none on the line of the Southern States, for they are all for slavery, but there is an eternal strife for the establishment of freedom or slavery in all the rest of the United States from the Missouri to the Pacific.

"If freedom was to triumph, there was no point where she could expect to meet the enemy except the place where she has met it here. If you had been false, slavery would have swept through the Territory of New Mexico and the whole country to the California was imperfectly secured to "California was imperfectly secured to freedom, and with a compromise you opened a new campaign here and crowned it with complete victory. Henceforth the battle is ended; henceforth the free laborer from every land on the earth can pursue his onward path to the Rocky Mountains.

"You not only occupy a pivotal position, but this great enterprise was attempted at a critical period. In 1854 all guarantees of freedom were abandoned, and Kansas, that had for forty years been free from the footsteps of slaves, was pronounced as much of a slave State as South Carolina.

"At this crisis the people of Kansas appeared on the stage, reviled, despised and hated, lifted the banner of liberty on high, and counteracted, peaceably, all the efforts to subdue them. In three years they not only secured freedom in Kansas, but in all the Territory of the United States,

"No other 100,000 people have contributed."

the Territory of the United States,
"No other 100,000 people have contributed so much for freedom as Kansas. Before this people, then, appearing for the first time, I how myself as I have never done before to any other people, in profound reverence—I salute you with gratitude and affection."

Alluding to the drouth be save:

Alluding to the drouth, he says:
"There will be no famine in Kansas, because there is wealth and credit enough to carry her through. If these will not do, I advise an appeal to friends in the East."
"Alfuding to their irrepressible conflict, he says:

The people of Kansas settled it there in favor of freedom.

'In New Mexico they tried to settle it in favor of slavery, and now find it impossible. He then reviewed the history of slavery extension at length, and said the Territories must be reserved for the free labor of overpopulated Europe.

Missouri has lost this emigration. Had she been wise, the population now in Kannas would have settled in her borders. She must look to Kannas for deliverance, She made in the control of the control s made richer by millions, by the settlement of Kansas by freemen."
He concluded as follows: "Henceforth, if my confidence in the stability of the Ameri-can Union wavers, I shall come here to learn that the Union is stronger than human ambition, because it is founded in the affections of the American people.

"If ever I shall waver in my devetion to liberty, I shall come up here to renew it. Here, under the sympathy of 100,000 freemen saved from slavery. "Henceforth these shall not be my sentiments alone, but the sentiments of all men will come up to Kansas as they go up to Jerusalem. This shall be the sacred city." The Governor and party leave for the East to-morrow morning.

stopped by a river. The Dominican said to the Franciscan that as he went harefoot he was forced by the rule of his order to carry him across, that if he refused he would commit a great sin. The Franciscan yielded to this observation, and took the other on his shoulders. When they were in the middle of the ford the Franciscan asked the other if he had any money about him, "Yes, replied the other, I have two reals." "I ask you a thousand pardons, brother." rejoined the disciple of St. Francis, "but my order forbids my carrying money," And with these words he plumped his man into the river.
